

Abstract

A metal cross-car beam for support of components in a vehicle comprises a hollow metal tube of unitary construction including end sections, said tube formed to accommodate direct attachment of vehicle components at various points to said tube, wherein said end sections are 5 formed into flanges which attach directly to a vehicle body.